

The Way:

an unspoken law heeded by all creatures.

Take what you need, but never waste what you take.

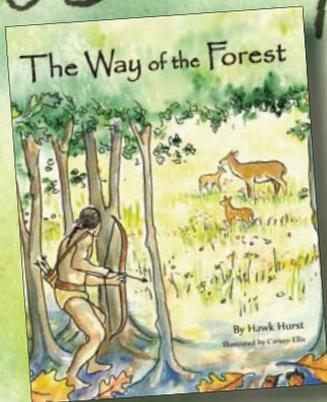

For eons all have followed this sacred trust...

The Way of the Forest

By Hawk Hurst

Illustrated by Carson Ellis

THE WAY OF THE FOREST

By Hawk Hurst, Illustrated by Carson Ellis

ISBN: 978-0-9723829-9-1, Frontline Press

The Way of the Forest is the story of a happy and prosperous tribe of People who have lived for generations in harmony with the land, the plants, and the animals. Upon awakening one morning, they discover that everything they have always depended upon to survive has disappeared. All the animals have departed, and the plants will no longer offer sustenance.

Facing the threat of starvation, no one knows what has happened, or what to do. Taking it upon themselves to discover the truth, two young warriors – a boy and girl from the tribe – embark upon an epic journey to learn what has befallen their People.

“ . . . a wonderful tale of the connection between humans and our natural world . . . ”

—MISSY SCHENCK, co-owner, Green River Preserve

www.thewayoftheforest.com

HAWK HURST – author, storyteller, musician, craftsman and educator

For more than two decades, storyteller Hawk Hurst has brought to life the wonders and wisdom of ancient cultures, offering his educational programs to audiences of all ages across the country and around the globe. An accomplished naturalist and master craftsman, he personally creates many of the Native American-style flutes and drums used during his performances. Hawk is an eight-time recording artist and the author of two children's books, The Story of the First Flute and his latest, The Way of the Forest. He and his wife live in Charleston, South Carolina where they operate Merhaven Bed no Breakfast.

Visit www.hawkhurstflutes.com for more information about booking Hawk Hurst for classes, performances, school programs, book signings and other appearances, or e-mail hawk@hawkhurstflutes.com.